I hate you, and I no longer want to be your friend.

Why start from the end?

Dear Shirley,

Remember last Saturday afternoon when I was playing in the park with my boyfriend and you came over, and he told me that when my back was turned, you kissed him?

And also, on Sunday when you came to my house and my Mom made you a tuna fish salad for lunch and you said: "Yech! That's the worst salad I ever ate!"?

And yesterday, when my cat brushed against your leg, you kicked her and threatened to sic your dog "Monster" on her?

Well, for all of these reasons, I hate you, and I no longer want to be your friend.

Lucy

Dear Shirley,

I hate you, and I no longer want to be your friend.

Here are my reasons:

1. You stole my boyfriend.
2. You insulted my mother.
3. You scared my cat.

What is the most important sentence?

The most important sentence is:

"Well, for all of these reasons, I hate you, and I no longer want to be your friend."

This sentence clearly communicates the main message and the conclusion of the letter.

Bottom Line Up

Dear Shirley,

Remember last Saturday afternoon when I was playing in the park with my boyfriend and you came over, and he told me that when my back was turned, you kissed him?

And also, on Sunday when you came to my house and my Mom made you a tuna fish salad for lunch and you said: "Yech! That's the worst salad I ever ate!"?

And yesterday, when my cat brushed against your leg, you kicked her and threatened to sic your dog "Monster" on her?

Well, for all of these reasons,

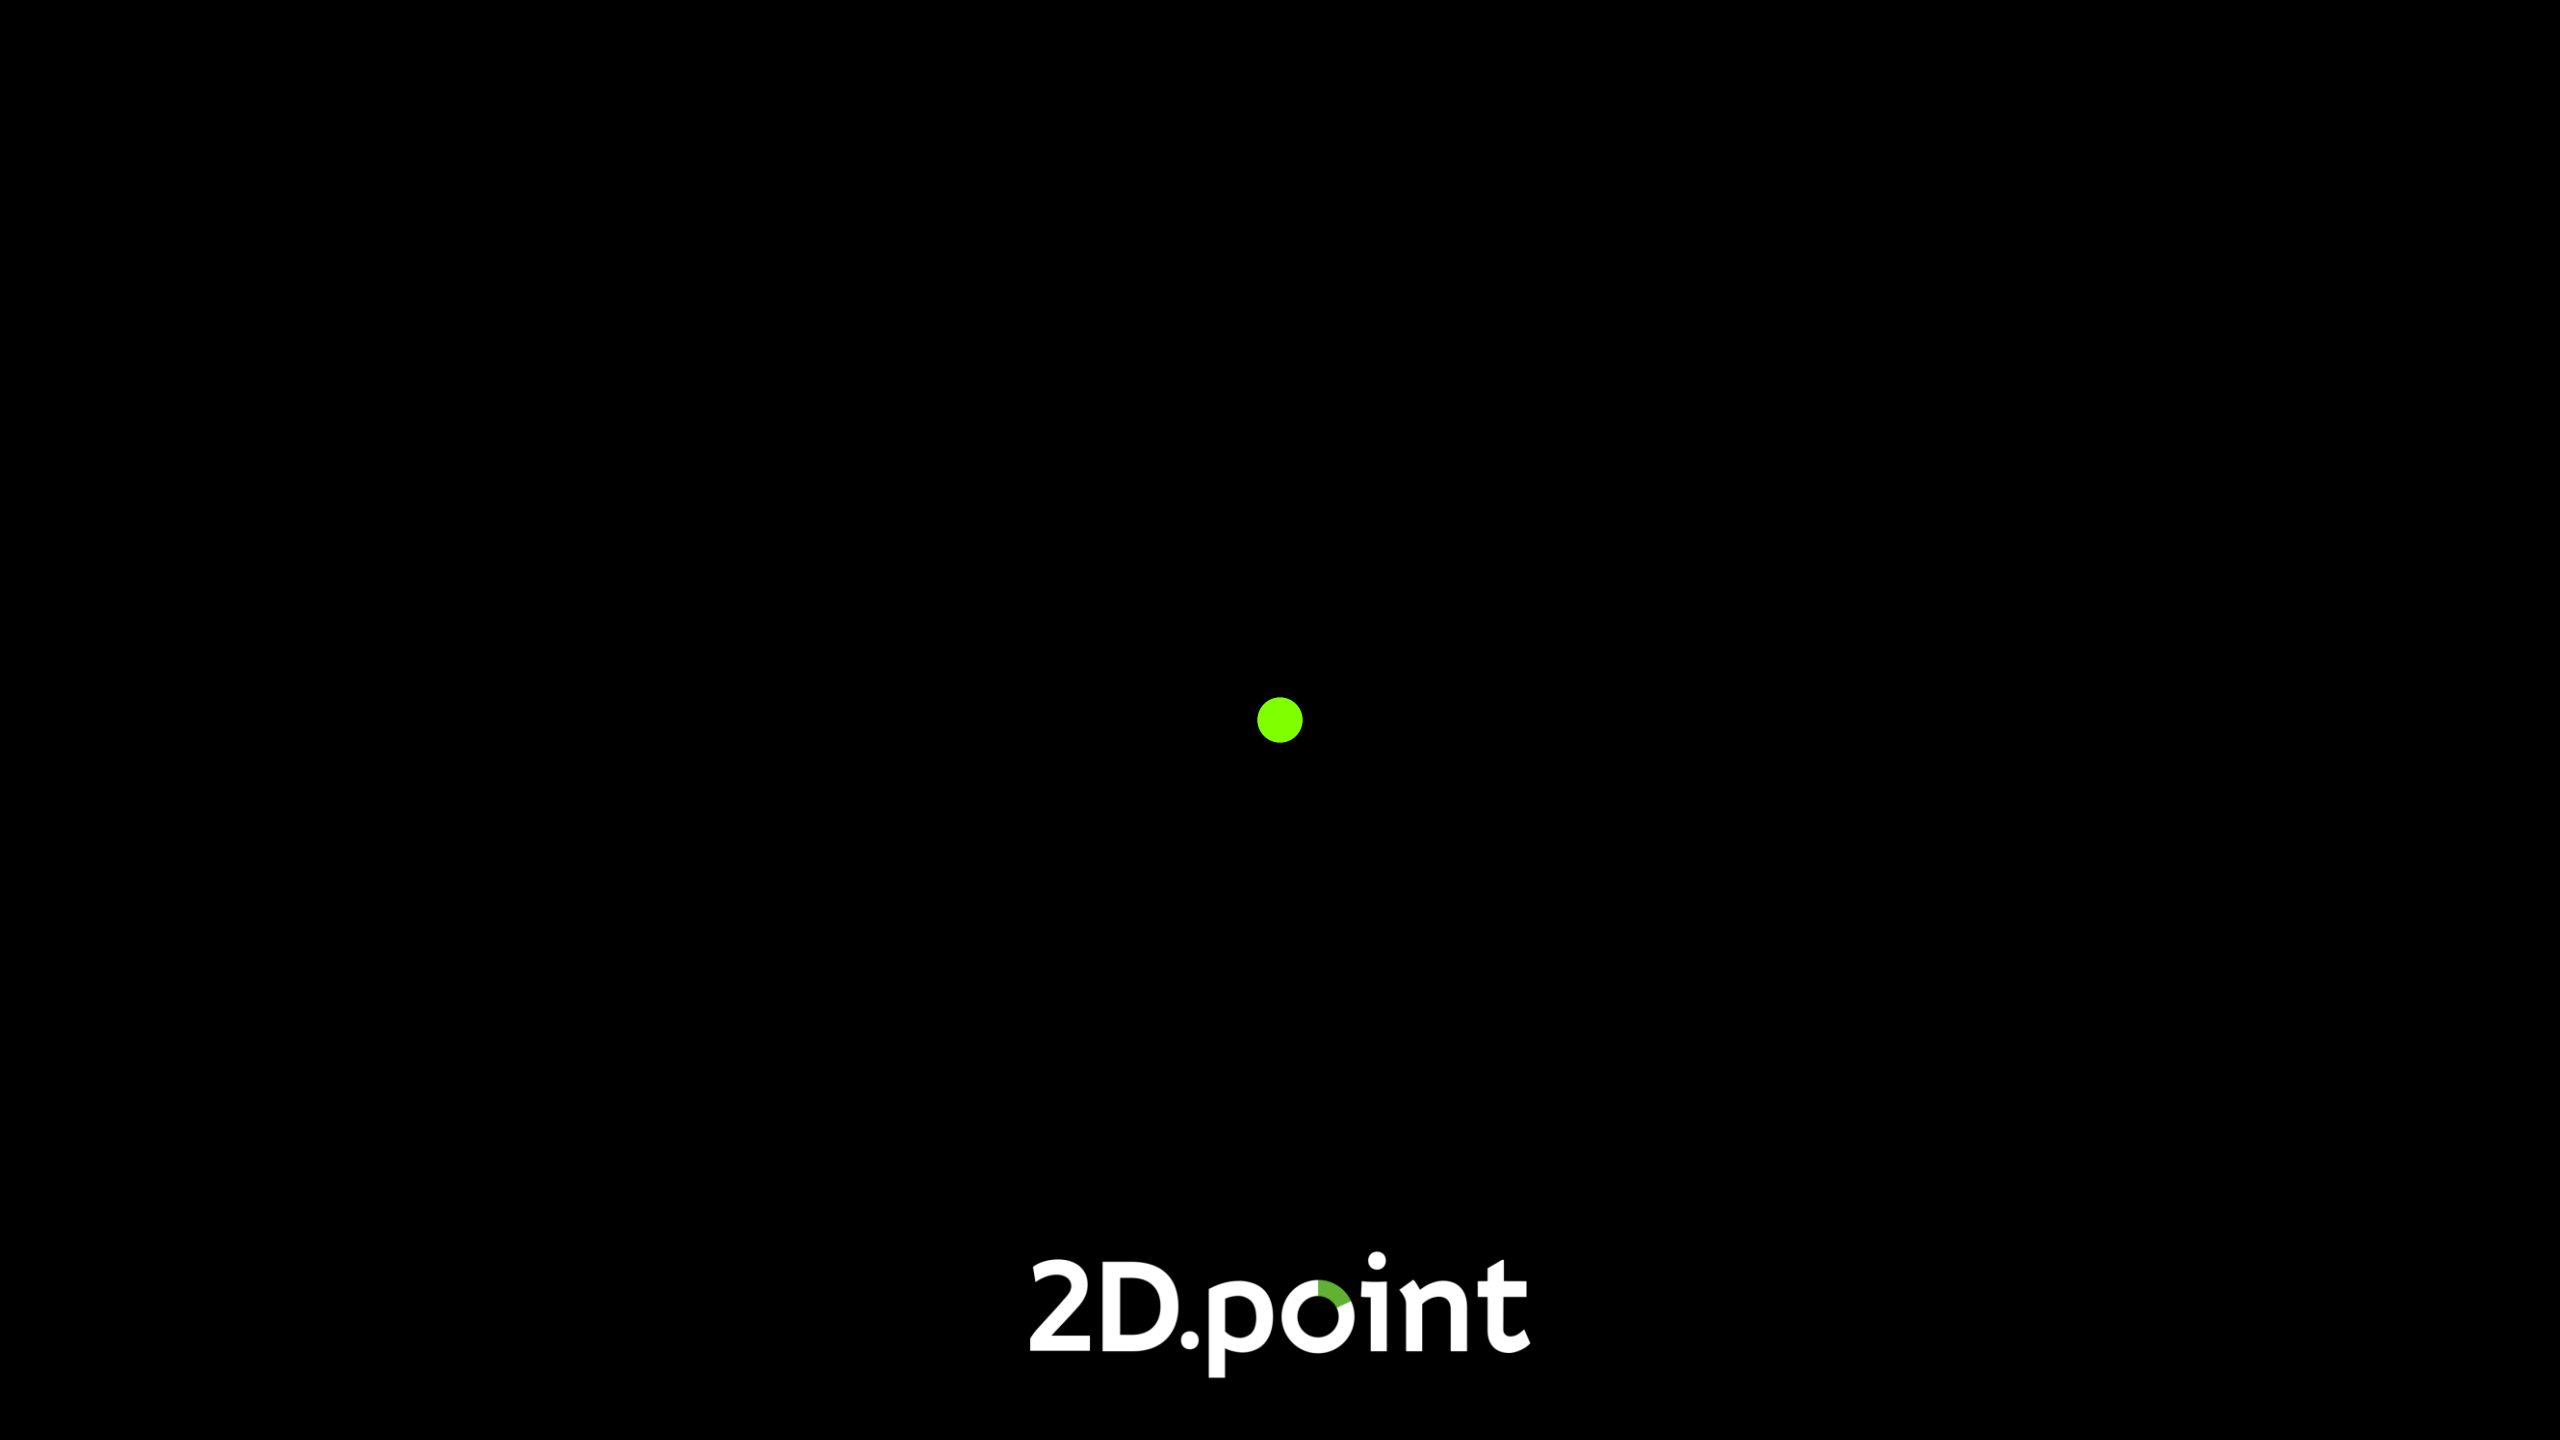

I hate you, and I no longer want to be your friend.

Dear Shirley,

I hate you, and I no longer want to be your friend.

Here are my reasons:

1. You stole my boyfriend.
2. You insulted my mother.
3. You scared my cat.

2D.point